But when she boldly seduces Grey Sexton, a self-controlled merchant prince from New York, she finds herself too fascinated by his ice-over-fire nature to stay away. His possessive determination to own her, body and soul, threatens to expose her secret erotic life to public shame.

But Beth will only surrender her love to a man she can trust. And Grey's materialistic approach to relationships leaves her little reason to believe he can ever give her what she truly needs. For these two cynical yet lonely people, can deep sexual intimacy work a miracle and lead to the opening of their hearts?

Shocked and hurt by Grey's distance, Beth wonders whether he truly returns the burning love she feels for him.
