This volume shows the flaps available for reconstruction of defects in the head and neck. The information in the original McCraw and Arnold's Atlas of Muscle and Musculocutaneous Flaps (1986) has been expanded and additional clinical applications, including free tissue transfer, have been explored to provide a truly comprehensive reference for the head and neck surgeon. As in the original McCraw and Arnold's Atlas, each flap is demonstrated in cadaver dissection and clinical case photographs, and the text is in an easy-to-read outline format to serve as a ready reference for the anatomical basis and clinical application of each flap. Highlights of this book are the full-color photographs and the extensive bibliography.
