Rough Waters Patricia Dimsdale

Rose is a biologist who is applying her knowledge of plants by working for a native museum during the summer at a remote BC coastal village. Her boyfriend Mike is angry with her for not helping him with his research instead. While doing fieldwork, Rose is shot and wounded in the arm. She does not know who did this and why. Rose meets a fisherman, Tormie, who becomes a trustworthy friend. The quality and integrity of the coastal people impress Rose, and she wonders about returning to university in Vancouver when her contract is finished, or remaining in the wilderness she loves.
