Are women's fragile land rights in Africa being eroded in a period of privatization and land reforms sponsored by the World Bank? Changing global employment and trade patterns and the HIV/AIDS epidemic has affected women in particular. A complexity is that women's and men's interests within households are both joint and separate. Yet many land reform programmes are based on the notion of a unitary household in which resources benefit the whole family. Under colonialism the codification of customary law generally strengthened the rights of men over women. Today new land market opportunities also tend to put women at a disadvantage. Women's secondary rights to land are being extinguished. The detailed, local level research in this volume not only challenges the status quo, but demonstrates that another world is possible and documents the many ways women in Eastern Africa are finding to ensure their rights to land.
