Few places in Italy have attracted foreigners as Florence has. Since the times of Goethe's Italian Journey, followed by the aristocrats of half of Europe, the Tuscan capital has been the destination of pilgrimages of the young off-springs of the European Intelligentsia, artists, musicians and noblemen who came here to spend the winter. The "Englishmen" of Room With a View were really Americans, Russians, Germans, Poles. Cosmopolitan city since the times of the Medicis, Florence has never renounced the role of City of Art, hospitable and charismatic. Among the many guides for Florentine hospitality published across the years, very few offer serious and trustworthy instruments for the traveller in search of a room or an apartment. Independently of budgets and the stars of the official classification. Palidano Press has, hence, published this directory which offers an annotated and up-to-date instrument for the possible destinations for those who want to stay in the city or nearby. The 100 best structures among hotels, pensions, apartments and agro-tourism properties. This because sometimes it is not only a question of price but rather attention to detail, passion and taste. Among the solutions proposed, surprises are not missing.
